3. We discussed format for such a course and agreed that the one or preferably two days per month would be the preferred compromise. Naturally, they would prefer to have [REDACTED] I cited the application's short comings of having it out-house in that the problem relevance was almost completely submerged.

In early Sept. [] directed me to put the pieces together on a proposed in-house course in statistical analysis for intelligence purposes. Theme was as follows:

1. Over 2-3 year period develop key area of Agency statistical information processing in several technical offices. This disciplinary area presently weak.

2. OTR to be involved; ORD to support OTR actively as needed.

3. Effort to be relevant in sense that in-house sequence would deal directly with problems of multiple disciplines in intelligence course material.

4. Format to be range of alternatives so that supervisors would be losing only 5-10% of a man when he was committed. (1-2 days per month for 12 months for example)

A draft staff report is prepared; the enclosure is one effort in that area. []
